From the Pastor's Desk

Sometimes it seems as if Jesus is unconcerned with rule-keeping. He sometimes lets go of, and is even harshly critical of, those human rules that he thinks get in the way of focusing on what is essential in our relationship with God. At the same time, he shows great reverence for the Law given to Moses by God. He sees that the purpose of the Law is not to put God at a distance but rather to show that, as Moses says to the Israelites in the book of Deuteronomy, no nation "has gods so close to it as the Lord, our God, is to us whenever we call upon him."

What is essential to remember with any religious rule or law is that, unlike civic rules or laws, it is only of ultimate value if it is linked with the proper inner disposition; we cannot honor God with our lips but not in our hearts. Whether I am particularly happy about it or not, what is important about traffic laws is that I obey them. But if I go to Mass or fast or give alms in a grudging fashion, what good does this do me? It leaves untransformed my heart, which is the source of evil thoughts, unchastity, theft, murder, and so forth.

At the same time, our outward actions are important. The Letter of James says that we must be "doers of the word and not hearers only," because our outward actions affect our inward feelings. Fulfilling our religious obligations, even when we aren't particularly "feeling it," can be an important way in which we shape our dispositions. Just as with playing a sport or a musical instrument, the Christian life becomes more enjoyable and fulfilling with practice. So our life in Christ requires a delicate balancing act in which outward behavior is important even though ultimately it is the state of our heart that matters to God.

Holy Spirit, dwell within us to guide us in doing God's will, for you are the law that is written on our hearts. Amen.

- What is an activity that was difficult at first but has now become enjoyable? How might I similarly think of my spiritual life as something that requires practice?
- How careful am I in fulfilling my religious obligations? Does my concern or lack of concern to fulfill those obligations bring me closer to God or put God at a distance?

Shalom! Fr. Pat

See you in September!
